Manga

Matsukoma and Hashimoto began publishing the manga in the August 2013 issue of Media Factory's shōjo magazine Monthly Comic Gene. The series was based off a popular series of Twitter posts detailing the lives of real-life convenience store employees. An audio drama CD was released in February 2015.[1]

TV drama

It was announced in the September issue of Monthly Comic Gene that the series would be adapted into a live-action television drama.[1] The series will be written and directed by Yūichi Fukuda, and will premiere on Yomiuri TV , Hulu, and crunchyroll starting on 1 January 2016.[7][8]

Reception

As of the September issue of Monthly Comic Gene, the series had over 1 million copies in print.[1]

In a list of best-selling first volumes published in 2014, compiled by The Japan Publication Sales' Distribution Reform Group Comic Team, the series ranked number three.[9] It also ranked number three on a list of the top 15 manga series containing less that five volumes, based on a poll of 2,360 bookstore employees conducted by the online bookseller Honya Club.[10]
